case study: Big F'M – Sounding Off in Auckland

Larry had used BML Builders on two previous radio station projects. He knew BML's flexibility and 'can do attitude', so he had reassurance that the fit-out would go to plan. BML were also able to put Larry in touch with an architect to assist with his unique design.

Challenges:

The new radio station needed to be operational by 1st November 2008. The team at BML had only 12 weeks from sign off to deliver. One of the biggest time factors being the sound proofing of the studio and recording booths.

What Happened:

BML Builders started with an empty canvas and created a state of the art radio station. They also manufactured all the office furniture and designed, manufactured and installed an impressive kitchen/staff meeting area, boardroom and reception desk.

Outcomes:

The importance of being on air for their launch date of 1st November meant there was no room for error. Although there was a lot going on at once both client and contractor worked together to achieve a fantastic outcome.

Client Comments:

When approached to take photos for BML's website, Larry and the team at BIG FM were only too pleased to allow us through the fully functioning radio station.

On enquiring about how the build went Larry said "we are great people – so we only work with great people. BML are part of who we are. They worked long hours including weekends and were always available to discuss implementation challenges."
